Family Connection Mark 10:17-30

A man with many possessions asks Jesus what he must do to gain eternal life.

Today's Gospel might make us uncomfortable about our possessions. This discomfort offers us an opportunity to consider our possessions and our family's commitment to the poor. Material possessions are a necessity in our culture. Our use of these possessions and our attitude about their importance is our choice, however. It is a choice we can make with the awareness that our faith in Jesus commits us to show our care for the poor.

As you gather as a family, consider together these questions: Would it be possible to inventory our possessions? Are there things in our house that we no longer need or use? What might we do with these things? Read together today's Gospel, Mark 10:17-30. Talk about the warning about material possessions that Jesus gives in this Gospel. How does this make you feel? Choose an action that helps your family show its commitment to the poor. Conclude by praying together the Peace Prayer of Saint Francis.

Fr. Al's Ramblings... Guidelines for cremation clarified.

I was recently asked to clarify the rules for cremation. As Catholic Christians, we have always held to the practice of reverent reposition of the ashes. After all, we do not "own" our bodies indeed, they belong to the Lord, our bodies are temples of the Lord and not our own.

The instructions state that while at death the soul is separated from the body, at the time of the resurrection "God will give incorruptible life to our body" reunited with the soul.

"By burying the bodies of the faithful, the Church confirms her faith in the resurrection of the body, and intends to show the great dignity of the human body as an integral part of the human person whose body forms part of their identity," the instructions say. "She cannot, therefore, condone attitudes or permit rites that involve erroneous ideas about death, such as considering death as the definitive annihilation of the person, or the moment of fusion with Mother Nature or the universe, or as a stage in the cycle of regeneration, or as the definitive liberation from the 'prison' of the body."

I think, since cremation gained acceptance from the church in 1963, when it was decided that sacraments and funeral rites should not be denied to Catholics who have asked for cremation — as long as the choice wasn't made as a criticism of the church.

The Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith issued updated instructions on rules for cremation. The church reiterated its approval of cremation, but emphasized the need to bury them — all in one place — in cemeteries or other "sacred places".

"It is not permitted to scatter the ashes of the faithful departed in the air, on land, at sea or in some other way, nor may they be preserved in mementos, pieces of jewelry or other objects," according to the instructions.

Ashes also can't be divvied up among family members. The church says the goal is to keep the ashes together at a location where the departed won't be "excluded" from prayers and remembrances of other Christians.

The clarification by Pope Francis is forthright. In today's world we are a people who tend to be a bit too selfish. Most of the reasons I have witnessed for the disposition of the human body is in no way respectful to the deceased rather what is most convenient for the living relatives. I have heard every excuse from financial concerns to a desire to quicken the funeral process so as not to interrupt the busy schedules of the survivors. What about the due respect for the temple of God in the form of the body of the deceased?

*Blessings,
Fr. Al*
